CAMPAIGN FOR GRAND OPERA IN HONOLULU BEGINS

Honolulu will have a season of grand opera if plans now under way receive the support of the business community in the way of subscriptions. It is the intention of those interested in providing this treat for music lovers to bring the Lombardi Opera Company here following the close of its season on the Coast.

The proposition was fully discussed in the Star-Bulletin some weeks ago, and it was stated at the time that those interested would bring this famous company of vocalists here if afforded the support necessary.

An opera company unlike some other theatrical attractions never travels without guarantees, and it is this feature that must be provided for, it seems, before any further arrangements can be made.

It is the intention of the impresario behind the movement to start out several persons with subscription lists throughout the city. If the lists are sufficiently filled Honolulu will have real grand opera, otherwise not. It is planned to use the Liberty Theater for the purpose, because of its size and conveniences. The theater is to be remodeled for the purpose and the acoustics adjusted.

Among the artists in this famous company, which is known all along the Pacific Coast from Vancouver to Patagonia, are:

Sopranos, Tarquinia Tarkuini, Amilno Matini, Balvina Pereira, Rita D'Orta; mezzo sopranos, Ida Zizla, Flora Pineschi; tenors, Giuseppe Giorgi, Giuseppe Armanini, Alfredo Grazia; baritones, Giardini, Chevalier Nicoletti, Emilio Pineschi; basses, Giovanni Martini, Marco Bonaventura; conductor, Goetano Bavagnoli; assistant conductor, Giovanni Colucci; stage managers, Riccardo Petrovich, Alex Fugley, promoter Achille Gerati.

Bavagnoli, the conductor, is famous throughout Europe and is a favorite of Mascagni's. He was recommended to the Lombardi management by Polacco, who is well remembered at the old Tivoli Theater in San Francisco. Among the operas in the company's repertoire are "La Boheme," "Conchita," "Lucia," "Traviata," "Isabeau," and many of the standard operas produced on the Metropolitan stage.

COLONIZATION AND THE STATES

"The early statesmen of the United States," says United Empire, "pictured their country as eternally secure—a continental self-contained state—from the dangers of external attack. In this case theirs was the pioneering spirit which carried the first colonizers of America over seas, took them over the mountains to the Pacific coast, and has not permitted them to rest ever since. Blocked on the north by the political evolution of a people of the same kind, as themselves, they have spread east, west, and south, and the sea could be no barrier to the descendants (in theory) of the men of the Mayflower. Accordingly the United States spread across the Pacific, established herself in Central America, and, having bitten into Mexico in the north, is occupied with the economic conquest of that interesting country, with intervals in which a more direct method seems imminent. On the east we see that the Caribbean sea, the entrance to the Panama Canal, attracts much attention. Cuba has been occupied in a military sense more than once, and evacuated, but each time the American stamp is deeper. The formal incorporation of Cuba with the United States may be delayed. It involves a color question which the United States is by no means anxious to add to her present problems, but as an instance of the complete absorption of Cuba into the American orbit it may be remarked that British trade with the island has dwindled to such an extent that it is threatened with the same fate that has overtaken our commerce with the Philippines, Hawaii, and Porto Rico. British steamers no longer call at Cuban ports. The position taken up by the United States with regard to the 'Free Republic' of Liberia is another interesting departure. By advancing the money necessary to meet the creditors of the Black Republic Americans have taken the first step towards the regulation and protection of that ill-managed colony. The experience of Liberia is not a good testimony to the powers of self-government of the black man after a period of civilization. That some black races do possess organizing powers is shown by the history of the Zulu tribes, but there the foundation was a military one, and the purpose chiefly, if not solely, for defence varied by aggression. The Pax Britannica has taken the stuffing out of tribal organization, and the West Coast Africans, who furnished America with slaves, and whose descendants returned to found a black republic, had no such history behind them and were in a sorry condition of having nothing indigenous to build on. Their civilization, their political theories, their very architecture were borrowed, and fit neither their own characters nor the circumstances of life in a tropical colony. The United States has had to stretch out her hand once more over her adopted children, and so she is saddled, in addition to her Pacific and other colonizing experiments, with the responsibility of an African protectorate."
